Cruel and Implacable Tuaregs of Tripoli.

Native Desert Tribes Who Would Aid Turks to Resist Italian Conquest Believed Descendants of Crusaders.

Tripoli.—Should Italy seriously attempt the conquest of the interior of Tripoli an interesting situation will arise in the event, as appears probable, of the native Tuareg tribes coming to the assistance of the Turks. They are believed to be descendants of the Crusaders, and although Moslems, their favorite ornament is the cross, while many of their customs and some words of their language, such as angelus for angel and meal for God, are undoubtedly of Christian origin. Many are of the opinion, however, that they belong to the Berber tribes, once inhabiting the whole coast line of North Africa, and that they took possession of the desert regions in the hinterland of Tripoli when the main body of this people were driven back to the Atlas mountains by the immigrating Arabs, who swarmed over the whole of North Africa in the eleventh century.

The Berbers are of Semitic origin and formerly professed the Christian religion, but since the Arab conquest they have retrograded in every way, and are now among the most bigoted adherents of Mohammedanism.

It is not improbable that many of the Crusaders may have remained in Africa and made common cause with the Christian tribes against the invading Arab, as some of the expeditions against the Moslems of Palestine landed in Africa, St. Louis, the leader of the seventh and eighth crusades, dying at Tunis; but, be that as it may, the Tuaregs are now staunch supporters of the religion of Mohammed. The shape of the head and features favor the European rather than the Oriental type. The hair is dark and the beard small. The eyes are dark and piercing. The Tuaregs are cruel, suspicious and implacable, are usually at war either with their neighbors or among themselves, and are superb guerilla fighters. It is evident that an alliance between these tribes of the desert and the undoubtedly courageous soldiers of Turkey will make the Italian occupation of the interior an undertaking of considerable difficulty. The native population in the hinterland of Tripoli numbers about 300,000.

LOSES HAIR AS SHE SLEEPS

Pretty Ohio Girl Is Victim of Peculiar Snail, Who Clips Off Her Tresses.

Lima, O.—Pretty eighteen-year-old Jennie Williams awoke one morning recently to find that while she slept her thick tresses of long brown hair had been shorn from her head. The hair was found lying upon the top of a dresser with the heavy shears that had been used in committing the deed upon it. A silver mirror was upon the foot of the bed.

Police are at a loss to ascertain a motive for the deed, although they are looking for a former boarder at the Williams home, who, it is said, attempted to force his attentions upon the young lady.

The victim is the daughter of the late John Williams at one time proprietor of the largest hotel in the city.

His coffin was three feet three inches wide, and it took 12 pallbearers to carry it.
